Samford Charity Giving Exceeds $200,000

Samford faculty and staff contributed $200,372.81 to the 2003 Samford Charity campaign that ended Dec. 31. A total of 519 employees gave to the fund, which oversubscribed its goal by some $30,000. Contributions support the Samford Fund, Samford Habitat for Humanity House, United Way and the Samford Emergency Assistance Fund.

Thanks to all who gave to Samford Charity. Inside Samford ran an initial list of donors in the December–January issue. Following are additional donors to Samford Charity. Every effort has been made to provide correct information; however, if names have been listed incorrectly or omitted, the editors apologize and ask that you notify the Office of University Relations at ext. 2792 so that corrections may be included in a future issue.

A total of 70.4 percent of Samford's 728 full-time employees contributed. Monty Hogewood, director of Annual Giving and senior development officer, served as campaign chairman.

Hargrave Underscores Need To Be Responsive to Academic Needs

Dr. Alan D. Hargrave was named associate provost and chief information officer at Samford. The position entails broadened responsibilities for developing a new technology plan for the University.

Hargrave, associate provost for learning resources since 1996, assumed his new position Jan. 1. He continues to have responsibility for academic computing and adds responsibilities for administrative computing.

The appointment follows several months of evaluation of Samford's academic and administrative computing activities by officials seeking the best way to meet future technology demands.

"Our technology plans need to focus on the academic mission of the University," said Hargrave. "One goal is to improve communication with students and faculty about expectations of technology. This involves listening to their needs and being proactive about acquiring technology to meet both present and future needs."

Two high priorities are enhancing technology renewal and addressing the increasing expectations of technology, he said.

"The Internet has brought a transformation in expectations for access to information and services," he added. "The Internet is always on, and services such as Amazon.com are always available. Our constituencies expect no less of the services that we as a University deliver. Our services, from admission to final transcripts (and everything in between), need to be available as close to 24/7 as possible."

Hargrave was head of academic computing at Baylor University when he came to Samford to fill a new position, guiding students and faculty to make integrated use of computers and books in personal study and classroom learning. At the time, the position was new not only to Samford but for academic circles within Alabama. ■

Samford Outlines Plan to Enhance Academics, Increase Student Body to 5,000, Add Facilities

Samford University has announced plans to add endowed professorships and scholarships, build new buildings and renovate old ones, increase the size of its student body, and grow its endowment.

The plan is part of a sweeping initiative approved by Samford's Board of Trustees to chart the University's course for the next decade. Outlined by President Thomas E. Corts in a Jan. 29 address to students and faculty, it also underscores the University's commitment to offer "a rigorous academic experience, remain loyal to Christian beliefs and values, and continue as a friendly, caring community."

These commitments were approved as part of the plan by trustees to state "the bedrock elements of Samford University's identity and mission," said Dr. Corts. He described the commitments as a "promise" for all Samford generations.

"A university is intended to stretch beyond the lifetimes of any of us," Corts said at the opening convocation of the spring term. "Renewing itself, it does not grow old, does not retire, never finishes its course. We have the satisfaction of passing the torch to our successors who will perpetuate its distinctive mission.

"Our generation must leave Samford even better than we found it," he added.

Toward that end, Corts outlined specific parts of the initiative approved by trustees after months of study. The plan, he said, would "define Samford's future." Some high points include:

- An increase of 400 in the undergraduate student body, bringing overall enrollment to 5,000 with about 70 percent being undergraduate. Samford's current enrollment is 4,440.
- Living space for the increased number of resident students at a cost of about $10 million.
- At least $20 million in additional endowed scholarships. "We want outstanding students who are motivated to serving others, and to making the world better—including students with modest means and those from other parts of the world," said Corts.
- Minimum of 20 additional endowed professorships.

Enron Whistle-blower Watkins Speaks

Sherron Watkins, former Enron Corporation vice president who blew the whistle on accounting irregularities in the company, will speak at Samford Feb. 19. Her appearance will be at 10 a.m. in Reid Chapel.

Watkins was named one of three Time magazine Persons of the Year for 2002 for her efforts to head off the accounting scandal and for her testimony before Congressional committees investigating Enron's demise.

"As whistle-blowers, these three became fail-safe systems that did not fail," said Time. "For believing—really believing—that the truth is one thing that must not be moved off the books, and for stepping in to make sure that it wasn't, they have been chosen by Time as its Persons of the Year for 2002." ■

Out & About

Jim Angel, Dan Czech, Donna Dunaway, Stephen Ruble and Chuck Sands (Exercise Science and Sports Medicine) made presentations at the annual Hawaii International Conference on Education in Honolulu during January. Their topic was "Fitness Levels of American and Chinese Children: A Proposed Collaborative Project." Angel and Sands also presented "Problem-Based Learning in Health Education Courses." Dunaway, Ruble and Sands presented "Capstone Research Experiences for Undergraduates."

Timothy Paul Banks (Music) presented a lecture-demonstration at the Alabama Music Educators Association annual in-service conference at Auburn University Jan. 16. The presentation, "Et la Gauche? Toward a Methodology for Left-Hand Use in Conducting," also featured Samford students and alumni as demonstrators.

Jim Boockholdt (Business) presented a paper co-authored with Bill Service (Business) at the national meeting of the Decision Sciences Institute in Washington, D.C., Nov. 25. The paper was entitled "Education, Work Experience and Ethical Values."

Norfleete Day (Divinity) led a Winter Bible Study on 1–2 Timothy for New Hope Baptist Church in Romulus, Ala., Jan. 25.

Carol Dean (Education and Professional Studies) and four students—Erin Dawson, Sarah Terry, Jason Wood and Erin Williams—spent three weeks during January Term working in Perry County public schools. Dawson, Wood and Williams worked with children and teachers at the elementary school in Marion, and Terry tutored in high school. The project was funded by Samford in Mission as the beginning of an ongoing relationship with Perry County.

David Chapman (Arts and Sciences) published an article, "Undergraduate Research and the Mandate for Writing Assessment," in the fall 2003 issue of Peer Review, a publication of the American Association of Colleges and Universities.

Eric Fournier (Geography) presented a paper, "Edward Ullman, the Port of Mobile and the Birth of Modern Economic Geography," at a recent meeting of the Southeastern Division of the Association of American Geographers in Charlotte, N.C. The paper was one of 14 from more than 100 recognized as excellent by the association's program committee. An expanded version will be published in a forthcoming book, The South's Contribution to American Geography. The research leading to the article was supported by a Samford University Faculty Development Grant. Also, Fournier was named to the project advisory board for the Center for Spatially Integrated Social Science's new initiative, Spatial Perspectives on Analysis for Curriculum Enhancement [SPACE]. The project, funded by the National Science Foundation and based at the University of California–Santa Barbara, will introduce methods of spatial analysis to social science instructors via a series of workshops.

Richard Franklin (Dean of Students' Office) was elected president-elect of the Southern Association of College Student Affairs [SACSA] at the organization's annual meeting in Myrtle Beach, S.C., in November. He begins his term this fall.

Timothy George (Divinity) edited the new book, For All the Saints: Evangelical Theology and Christian Spirituality, with Alister McGrath. Published by Westminster John Knox Press, the book includes essays originally presented at a Beeson conference cosponsored by the Divinity School and Wycliffe Hall, a theological school at Oxford University in England. Six chapters were written by Samford and Beeson faculty—Gerald Bray, George, Calvin Miller, Robert Smith, Randy Todd and Wallace Williams. Also, George made a presentation, "Faith and the Challenges of Secularism," at a fall conference at Princeton University sponsored by its James Madison program in American Ideals and Institutions.

- Endowed lectureships for each of Samford's eight colleges.
- An instrumental music and recital hall for the School of Performing Arts. Samford offers a full orchestral program including instruction in strings, woodwind, reed and percussion, an orchestra and marching band.
- Arena and fitness/wellness center.
- Renovation of Brooks Hall to serve as a home for Howard College of Arts and Sciences.
- Renovation of Beeson University Center, Robinson Hall law building, Pittman residence hall and Dwight and Lucille Beeson Center for the Healing Arts, along with re-plumbing and re-wiring of other older structures.

The price tag for new programs and facilities could be as much as $200 million, Corts said.

"Samford is today launching a new effort," he said, "more specifically, defining its future. It is intensifying its public presence and more extensively portraying itself to the public, and aggressively gathering resources, both short-term and long-term.

"These are not plans that will be accomplished in weeks, or even a couple of years," he said. "We cannot rest on the achievements of recent years and simply fade into the sunset. We must boldly grasp the destiny within Samford's reach. And seriously implementing well-thought plans, and well-funded objectives, will give Samford a running leap into the future."

The reaction of donors and potential donors to specific goals will help determine the order in which projects are completed, said Corts. "All the needs are immediate," he said.

Samford officials expect the instrumental music and recital hall for the School of Performing Arts to be one of the early projects completed, although no timetable was announced. ■

Joys & Sorrows

Congratulations to . . .
