Quotable

Samford faculty experts share thoughts with media.

John Carroll (Law) to Reuters March 14 on Judge Roy Moore's victory in the March 13 primary election for Alabama Supreme Court chief justice eight years after he was removed from that same post

"It really boils down to backlash against the federal court order and his removal from office the first time." Carroll noted that Moore's campaign ad touted his track record of standing up to the American Civil Liberties Union. "That was sort of a code word for, 'Remember what happened to me last time,'" Carroll said.

Pat Terry (Kinesiology and Nutrition Science) to Today's Dietician magazine for March 2012 in an article on Best Breakfasts Around the World, discussing Costa Rican breakfasts. She referred to studies of the Nicoya Peninsula of Costa Rica, one of the "Blue Zones" of the world in which people live measurably longer on average compared with other countries.

"Fish, vegetables, soup and nuts for breakfast? Yes, and much more. Why? Because it's not what foods you eat for breakfast but the nutrients in those foods that are important." She said the typical Costa Rican breakfast includes lots of pineapples, oranges, mango, papaya, corn, beans, rice, squash of all kinds, fresh cheese and eggs.

Law School To Celebrate 50 Years at Samford

Cumberland School of Law is one of America's oldest law schools, founded at Lebanon, Tenn., in 1847. For the past half-century, it has been a part of Samford, and will celebrate that anniversary with a weekend of special events April 13–14.

Cumberland School of Law joined Samford in 1961 when then-Howard College paid $125,000 for the law school, "lock, stock and alumni," said a 1961 issue of Newsweek magazine.

Current alumni, their families and friends are invited to enjoy the special reunion weekend saluting the last five decades of law school history.

Important Dates

1847—Cumberland was founded by Judge Abraham Caruthers. It pioneered an instructional method based on intensive trial practice, laying the foundation for today's widely acclaimed trial advocacy program.

1865—Its buildings were burned during the Civil War, but the school never stopped its programs.

1961—Cumberland School of Law moved to the Samford campus. In addition to America's longest-serving Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, the law school's graduates included 11 U.S. Senators, 75 U.S. congressmen, 15 governors and two U.S. Supreme Court Justices.

2012—The law school's innovative curriculum continues to break ground through its use of technology in the courtroom, sponsorship of one of the nation's first centers for Biotechnology, Law and Ethics, and the only Community Mediation Center in the South. Its trial advocacy program ranked among the top five in the nation during 2010 and 2011, according to U.S. News & World Report.

The law school has about 8,000 living alumni in 48 states and abroad. About 3,800 live in Alabama, more than 2,100 of those in greater Birmingham.

Old Howard Bike Ride Set for April 21

The eighth annual Old Howard 100 Bike Ride will be Saturday, April 21, beginning at 9 a.m. from the grounds of Judson College in Marion, Ala. The route through the scenic rural area of Perry, Hale and Dallas counties in west central Alabama offers rides of 30, 45, 75 or 100 miles on low-traffic roads.

"Or you can join the group at the ride start but turn around before Newbern for a shorter length," said ride co-organizer Rosemary Fisk, associate dean of Howard College of Arts and Sciences.

The ride offers rest stops at the Auburn Rural Studio headquarters in Newbern, the ground of Magnolia Grove in Greensboro, Morning Star Baptist Church in west Perry, the Suttle volunteer fire department and the Selma Public Library.

Registration for the ride is $35 (or $45 after April 13), which includes dinner from 2 until 5 p.m. The student registration fee is $15, and the fee for Perry, Dallas and Hale county residents is $10.

Proceeds benefit Sowing Seeds of Hope, a partnership between Cooperative Baptists, the Perry County Chamber of Commerce and the Perry County Health Department to improve the quality of life for all citizens of Perry County. Howard College of Arts and Sciences sponsors the event.

Last year's ride saw a record 250 cyclists and raised more than $4,000. Dean Charlie Sands and interns from McWhorter School of
