The program accommodates those working part or full-time, including those currently teaching with provisional certificates, and to this end, courses are offered in late afternoon, evening, or Saturdays. Since observation in a variety of classroom settings is a vital component of teacher education, teacher candidates enrolled in the program are required to complete a minimum of 20-65 observation hours per term (this does not apply to content coursework), depending upon the course schedule. Students who work full-time must be willing to use leave or vacation time to complete this assigned classroom setting. It is possible, when teaching with a provisional certificate, to obtain permission to overlap one's regular teaching assignment with the internship experience.

The program is composed of 36 credit hours (depending upon prospective student's transcript) plus any pre-requisite credit hours necessary for admission. Of this total of 36 hours, 24 hours are in professional courses, including the internship, and 12 are in the student's chosen content area or teaching field. If candidates pace themselves to advance with their cohort group, the program can be completed in 16-18 months. All students must complete all parts of the program within five years (3 years if currently teaching under a Special Alternative Certificate).
