Samford University’s School of Public Health invites individuals interested in serving in a Christian university environment to apply for the position of Assistant/Associate Professor and Graduate Program Director in the Department of Healthcare Administration. This full-time, tenure track position is a 12-month appointment. The faculty member will be responsible for teaching in the graduate and undergraduate programs. This position will have faculty and leadership responsibilities including teaching online and face-to-face, student mentorship, service, scholarship, leading the graduate program, and CAHME accreditation.

Qualified candidates will be a graduate of a regionally accredited university with an earned doctorate degree in health administration, health services research, public health, or a closely related field. The successful individual must exhibit effective verbal and written communication skills, and interpersonal skills. The candidate must also embrace the interprofessional teaching model of the College of Health Sciences.

Salary and rank are dependent upon qualifications, academic teaching experience, work experiences, research, and scholarship accomplishments. Preference will be given to candidates who have online academic teaching experience in healthcare administration, health policy, and business related courses.

The College of Health Sciences includes four schools: Ida Moffett School of Nursing, McWhorter School of Pharmacy, School of Health Professions, and School of Public Health. The college offers multiple degree programs and majors within the health sciences with an interprofessional education focus that reflects today’s team approach to health-care delivery and professional practice.
