The Samford University Master of Social Work (M.S.W.) program offers distance field placement options to students in their concentration year. Domestic and international opportunities offer learning experiences that facilitate social work skill development and service in unique settings.

How does a distance placement work?
Distance placements occur in the final semester of the concentration year, so the student would take both Field Placement III and Field Placement IV concurrently in the final semester. This means, the student would have to complete 500 hours of field placement in one semester.

How is other coursework completed?
Most required courses can be completed via technology. Courses such as Concentration Specialization Seminar and Applied Research can be structured so the focus of the work is applicable to the field placement and can be completed while on location. Electives can be completed during another semester. Once a student expresses interest in a distance placement, the specific course of study can be reviewed and discussed.

Will doing a distance placement affect graduation dates?
For most students, the graduation date should not be affected, provided the coursework can be completed during a distance placement. Those students who are full-time Advanced Standing will need to take the final two electives the following summer.

What is the process for selecting a distance placement?
Distance placement can take time to finalize due to the constantly changing circumstances around the world. It is important to express interest as soon as possible. Students need to contact the Director of Field Placement no later than the final semester of their foundation year. Full-time Advanced Standing students need to contact the Director of Field Placement during their first summer term.

What costs is the student responsible for?
Students maintain the same costs for distance placements as they do for local placements. Students are responsible for all living expenses, travel expenses, and tuition.